

BUSY THINGS

Home access

Library access

What is Busy Things?

Busy Things aims to make learning fun for kids. The animated characters and colourful settings encourage children to play and explore the hundreds of curriculum-linked games, activities and downloadable resources.

Busy Things is designed for children aged 3-11 to develop skills in problem-solving, reasoning, numeracy, communication, language and literacy.

With a team of teacher consultants to ensure the content offers maximum educational value and a number of awards under their belt, Busy Things is a must-try for parents of young children.

What can I use it for?

Busy Things is used to teach children about curriculum-based topics in a way that is interactive and fun, as well as educational.

With the extra hours at home while many of us are doing online schooling, now is the perfect time to maximize learning potential by logging onto Busy Things and working through the games.

To get started, go to the following web address, click on 'Busy Things' and enter your card number for free access:

<https://www.hawkesbury.nsw.gov.au/library/elibrary/online-for-kids>

Special features

- Bright colours and fun characters aimed to appeal to young children
- Curriculum-based topics, such as English, Math and Computing
- Children can play against each other using the 'busy box' feature
- New and updated activities listed under 'latest releases'

